The applicant explains:

I consent - as far as the processing of data is not governed by any other legal basis, that the temporary work agency saves my personal data which I have given during the entire application process (eg cover letter, CV, certificates, candidate questionnaires, candidate interviews) beyond the end of the concrete application process. I agree that the temporary work agency uses this data to contact me later, if necessary, and to continue the application process if I should be eligible for another job.

If I have communicated "special categories of personal data" in my letter of application or other submitted documents, my consent also applies to these data.

This consent also applies to data relating to my qualifications and activities from publicly available sources of data (in particular professional social networks) which the temporary work agency has permitted under the application procedure.

I declare that I give this consent voluntarily. I can refuse them without giving reasons, without having to worry about any

I may also revoke my consent in writing at any time; In this case, my data will be deleted, as far as no claims can be expected from the application process.

Revocation

The temporary employment agency informs the data subject that he may revoke the consent to data processing granted herewith at any time. The revocation can be in text form. Data processing is allowed until receipt of the revocation by the temporary work agency. The same applies to data processing on the basis of other permission facts after receipt of the revocation.
